APRIL 1 IS BUSY SEASON FOR TWO ADAMS OFFICERS

Many Deeds Are Entered at Office of Register and Recorder.

PROTHONOTARY IS KEPT ACTIVE

The annual first of April flood of business at the offices of the prothonotary and register and recorder at the court house was receding today after reaching its peak Thursday when real estate and business transactions kept the court house of-ficers busy.

Nearly a score of deeds were recorded on Thursday alone. An unusually large number of deeds had been filed the preceding day and they continued to be received today at the office of the register and recorder where mortgages also are handled.

Register and Recorder Quintin D. Rebert and his deputy, Miss Edna E. Eicholtz said that while April 1 remains the busiest day of the year, there is not the same volume of business during the day immediately following and preceding as there was several years ago. The business in that office is more evenly distributed throughout the year, it was stated. In the office of Prothonotary C. Arthur Brame, that official and his deputy, Miss Viola Sachs were kept busy filing, renewing and satisfying judgments; entering liens of various sorts, searching records, and performing the other routine duties of the office.

Included among recent property transfers listed in the office of the register and recorder are the following:

ANTICS OF 'PEG' DELIGHT BIGLER PLAY AUDIENCE

Three-Act Comedy "Peg O' My Heart," To Be Repeated This Evening.

FINAL SHOW BY H. S. DIRECTOR

The initial performance of "Peg O' My Heart," three-act comedy by J. Hartley Manners, by a cast of Peter Pan players of Biglerville high school, pleased a packed house Thursday evening in the Biglerville auditorium.

The play will be repeated at 8 o'clock this evening when five senior members of the cast will make their final stage appearance in a high school production. The play is the last to be produced by Mrs. Jessica Weaver Smith, organizer and successful director of the Peter Pan players during her service as a member of the faculty at the Biglerville high school. Following her marriage last week, Mrs. Smith resigned, effective at the end of the school year.

Veterans in Cast

A competent cast is headed by Miss Eleanor Dill, senior and veteran of other important stage productions in the upper county school, in the title role of "Peg," the Irish lass whose wit and vivacity delighted the audience. Wallace Coddington, a senior, as "Cousin Alaric Chichester" amused with his Oxfordian accent and able portrayal of a difficult role.

The other members of the cast, all of whom gave satisfactory support to the leading characters, were Josephine Black as "Ethel," Mrs. Chichester's daughter; Stanley Sheely, a senior, as "Mr. Hawkes," a solicitor; Elizabeth Starnes as "Mrs. Chichester," aunt of "Peg"; Harold Shank, a senior, as "Jarvis," the butler; Eugene Clark, a senior, as "Christian Brent"; Renee Shetter as "Bennett," the maid, and Kenneth Stine as "Jerry."

Special Music

Special music before the production and between the first and second acts was supplied by the high school band under the direction of Professor Charles Yost and a quartet comprising Wallace Coddington, Kenneth Stine, Paul Crum and Richard Pohl.

The technical staff for the production included Richard Pohl, stage manager and director; Bruce Nary, assistant stage manager; S. A. Ehman, faculty adviser on stage construction; Betty Routsong and Mae Baumgardner, business managers; Stanton Thomas and Fred G. Pfeiffer, make-up artists; Rhea Shue, Janet Carbaugh and Renee Shetter, property managers, and art work by the art department under the direction of Miss Velma Hykes, supervisor.

Presents 6-Foot Chimney Ladder To Local Firemen

A piece of useful equipment was presented to the Gettysburg fire company this morning by Gene Sikes, a member of the organization, when he turned over to the company officials a six-foot chimney ladder which has been mounted on the chemical truck.

Local firemen long have felt the need of a short ladder which will enable them to mount to the tops of chimneys which extend too far above a house roof to be reached by a man carrying a chemical tank. Without a short ladder, the firemen have been forced to place a long ladder from the ground to the top of the blazing chimney to apply the chemicals.

The ladder is of sturdy construction with metal braces. Rough metal plates on the ends of the ladder will prevent slipping on smooth roofs.

Faces Hearing on Assault Charge

On information of Ralph Miller, Steinwehr avenue extended, William Washington, colored, South Washington street, was arrested Thursday evening by Constable Horace L. Bender. A charge of assault and battery has been laid against Washington before Justice of the Peace John H. Baschore.

Miller alleges that Washington struck him in the face with his fist during a disturbance at the Savoy tap room, West High street, about 5:15 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Washington was released on his own recognizance for his appearance at a hearing this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

FRANCE LIFTS TAX ON APPLES

Suspension of Import Levy of 37 Cents on Apples Welcomed by County Growers.

Paris, April 2 (AP)—The ministry of agriculture granted benefits to American fruit growers today, suspending the import tax of 12 francs (about 35 cents) a box on pears and eight francs (about 37 cents) on apples.

The American embassy invoked a clause of the Franco-American trade treaty under which the signatories agreed to make possible full use of quotas to obtain the import tax suspension.

Suspension of the taxes will continue until June 30, when the 1936-37 quota, of which only 37 per cent had been filled up to the end of February, will expire.

The action of France in suspending the import tax on fruit was welcome news to Adams county growers, who ship many bushels of apples abroad yearly.

James Waddle To Get Hearing on Disorderly Count

James Waddle, 21, Wall alley, who was released from the county jail three weeks ago after serving a 30-day sentence for disorderly conduct, was again sent to the county jail Thursday evening on a similar charge laid by his father, John Waddle, Sr., also of Wall alley.

The elder Waddle went before Justice of the Peace John H. Baschore Thursday evening and filed a disorderly conduct charge against his son and the warrant was issued to Borough Officer Lloyd Wisler. Before the officer located the defendant the latter had put in his appearance at the jail and asked to be locked up. He is awaiting a hearing before Justice Baschore.

When he was sentenced last February to serve 30 days, Waddle thanked Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer, who imposed the sentence, for providing him with board and lodging for the remainder of the winter.

BURGESS LISTS STREETS THAT NEED REPAIRS

Only Few in Borough Not Included in Report to Council Committee.

PATCH WORK TO BE STARTED

Wheels were set in motion this morning to bring about the patching and general repair of a score of borough streets and intersections which are marked with chuck holes where the street surface has given way or excavations have been made for various reasons.

This morning Burgess Wilbur J. Stallsmith handed to Borough Councilman William E. Biddle, chairman of the highway committee, a long list of street sections that are in need of repair. Councilman Biddle stated that he will turn the list over to J. A. Tawney, street commissioner, with instructions to proceed with patch work.

Complaints Received

Burgess Stallsmith reported that he has received many complaints from residents of several sections of the borough about the rough condition of sections of streets and the presence of deep holes, many of them in the main streets.

The burgess reported a bad hole at Phil's garage on York street; one near the Louis Spahr lodging house, and another at the intersection of York and Stratton streets.

He listed holes on Liberty street and described the condition of East Middle street from Baltimore street to the fire engine house as bad and the remainder of the first block as fair.

Holes were reported in the second and third blocks of East Middle street and "a lot of holes" in the fourth block. At the intersection of Fourth and York street repairs are needed, he wrote.

The condition of Water street from Carlisle to Stratton street was given as "very bad" and holes were noted on both East and West Stevens streets. The bad hole near the center of Carlisle street close to the Tiber, also was called to the councilman's attention.

An alley intersection on College avenue was described as bad and holes were reported on West Broadway near College avenue, at the North Washington street intersection and midway in that block. The need for repairs was pointed to at Carlisle and Broadway and on East Broadway.

Many Streets on List

More holes were revealed on the second and third blocks of North Washington street and at all South Washington street intersections. A particularly deep hole was reported between West High and Breckenridge streets on South Franklin street.

The entire length of Breckenridge street has many holes, the burgess reported and mentioned other faults in Baltimore street from the Steinwehr avenue intersection to the borough line.

East High street is bad "in spots" and South Stratton street beyond East Middle needs attention, the borough councilman learned.

Other streets listed as needing repairs and patching were: South Franklin street from Chambersburg to West High street; West street, North and South Howard street, Hay street, Seminary avenue, and Chambersburg street from Franklin street to Buford avenue.

MADRID JOYOUS AS WAR FRONTS ARE MOVED BACK

Militiamen Parade Streets Singing and Shouting at Victory Reports.

(By the Associated Press) Madrid Spaniards Thursday night rang far ahead from long-beleaguered Madrid, which hailed the spreading action as added safety for itself.

Far north, insurgents launched a well-mapped offensive against the Basque capital of Bilbao while government forces moved against the erstwhile insurgent seat of Burgos.

In the south, government armies which beat back an insurgent drive toward Ciudad Real's rich mining region pushed thirteen miles into Cordoba province on the heels of their routed foe.

Militiamen Sing in Streets

Jubilant militiamen paraded in the streets of Madrid, singing and shouting at the government's victory reports, which they believed spelled at least temporary safety for the shell-torn capital.

Optimism extended beyond the borders of the war-racked land.

A French foreign office spokesman in Paris avowed that the French government "is more optimistic that the Spanish war will not entangle Europe than at any time since the war began."

Both French and British sources predicted that an effective control of the European "hands-off Spain" will be in operation within ten days.

Norman H. Davis, American ambassador-at-large, now in London, noted a slight relaxation in the Spanish tension, but he held that the effect of the war and European suspicions, made any disarmament move now impracticable.

France, meanwhile, instructed her warships to use force, if necessary, to prevent search and seizure of French ships by Spanish vessels.

The navy ministry announced "rights of belligerents" cannot be used by either side in the Spanish conflict "in present circumstances." Demonstrations against the insurgents in Spain were reported from Valladolid and Algeiras and reports persisted that there was serious reaction against them in Spanish Morocco.

Bombing Toll Near 200

Madrid's victory celebration was clouded partially by reports from Bilbao that the death toll from insurgent bombings Wednesday in the north had reached 200 in contrast with the sixty first estimated.

Official dispatches from Bilbao to Bayonne, France, said at least 120 persons were killed and several hundred injured in the bombings, carried out against Durango, sixteen miles from Bilbao.

The insurgent offensive against Bilbao carried a two-pronged action within about 22 miles of the Basque capital.

Rebels Surprise Foe

Insurgent soldiers swept forward under cover of a drizzle and surprised government forces, killing at least one hundred insurgent commanders reported, and capturing 500.

Late Flashes

Hershey Employees Start Sit-Down Strike

Hershey, April 2 (AP).—A sudden sit-down strike was called today in the "dream town" where a poor farmer boy built a great corporation "in the middle of a corn field."

Groups of employees of the Hershey chocolate corporation struck. Representatives of the committee for industrial organization charged the corporation violated three clauses of an agreement made on St. Patrick's day to recognize the C. I. O. as a bargaining agency for its members.

Roosevelt Favors Public Works Change

Washington, April 2 (AP).—President Roosevelt revealed today a new official attitude toward government work projects, involving the construction of different types of structures from those heretofore built.

He said at his press conference that prices of durable goods such as steel and copper were far too high and that it was time for the government to discourage expenditures for them and encourage expenditures for consumer goods.

He told a group of democratic congressmen Thursday, he said, that future public works funds should go for dredging, earthen dams and similar projects rather than for such permanent structures as steel bridges.

This change, he said, would create a larger purchasing power for consumer goods. There was danger, he said, in the too great spiral of heavy goods prices.

Joseph Gedeon Is Held on $10,000 Bail

New York, April 2 (AP).—Joseph Gedeon, 55-year-old upholsterer, was held in $10,000 bail today on a charge of possessing a revolver illegally, as detectives continued their search for the slayer of his artist model daughter, "Ronnie," and his estranged wife, Mary, in the Easter morning triple murder of Beekman Hill.

Assistant District Attorney Ray Leo said "I understand this man is the principal suspect in the Gedeon triple murder."

TIRE DEALER HONORED

Thirty employees of the Oyster tire company and ten guests attended a dinner at the Cashtown inn Thursday. H. M. Oyler, proprietor of the company, was presented with a bronze plaque by L. O. Veith, assistant district manager of the Goodrich tire company, in recognition of his record at a tire dealer in this area. George M. Jones and C. L. Albert, district salesman of the tire company, also were present.

WISACRES FOOLED BY PURSE; CONTAINED $350
Rockland, Maine, April 2 (AP).—A lot of wisacres were fooled by their own skepticism here Thursday.

A pocketbook, smilingly avoided by dozens of Main street pedestrians, turned out to be really looted, and to contain money—$350 worth. Mrs. Stanley Pastner, about to leave the city on a motor trip, dropped the pocketbook while shopping, she told police. Her husband found the bag after some passersby, more cynical than the rest, had kicked it into the gutter.

LOCAL STUDENTS IN COMPETITION

Three From Gettysburg High School to Take Part in Forensic League Contests.

Students from five high schools will compete in the fifth annual Southern Pennsylvania Interscholastic Forensic league contests to be held Saturday at Gettysburg college, sponsor of the league's events. The program for the day has been announced by Dr. Thomas L. Cline, chairman of the college committee in charge. Three Gettysburg high school students are entered in the contests.

Registration of the schools included in the league will take place from 9 to 10 o'clock Saturday morning in Weidensall hall on the campus. The day's program will open with a reading or declamation contest. Each of the schools will have one representative in competition. Each has been allowed to select his own subject. Lucille Grimm will represent Gettysburg high school in this contest.

George Hanawalt will be the Gettysburg high school entry in the extemporaneous speaking contests which will be held at 1:15 o'clock in Weidensall hall on the campus after the persons attending the contests have been entertained at lunch at the Hotel Gettysburg by the college. Doctor Cline has announced that the subjects to be assigned in the extemporaneous speaking will be chosen from some phase of the new deal.

The final debate to be staged between Hanover and Carlisle will follow at 2:30 o'clock in the same building with Dean Wilbur E. Tilberg acting as the presiding officer. Hanover high school, champion of the southern division, will be represented by its negative team, and Carlisle, winner of the northern division, by its affirmative team. Hanover was undefeated in its triangle which includes Gettysburg and Waynesboro.

The question for debate is "Resolved: That all electric utilities should be governmentally owned and operated." There will be an innovation this year in the debate awards in that the runner-up as well as the winner will receive a loving cup.

Following the debate, there will be a recreational period during which those present will be taken on a tour of the campus. A brief rest period will precede the banquet to be held at 6 o'clock in the Hotel Gettysburg at which time the after-dinner speaking contest will take place with one person from each school competing. Edna Mae Black represents Gettysburg high school in the after-dinner speaking competition.

Doctor Cline will be toastmaster at the banquet and Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of the college, will give an address of welcome. All winners will be announced and awards made at the banquet.

The following schools are included in the league: Gettysburg, Hanover, Shippensburg, Waynesboro, Carlisle, and Mechanicsburg. Shippensburg, however, did not enter a debating team in the league this year and will not have any representatives in the other contests.

ASK LUTHERANS TO FOSTER UNITY

Washington Leader Says More Than Defensive Alliances Are Needed.

Philadelphia, April 2.—"A plague on theologians if they stand in the way of Lutheran unity!"

That was a sample of the sentiment expressed Thursday as approximately 140 clergymen from scattered sections of the United States closed a two-day convocation under the auspices of the Alumni association at the Lutheran Theological seminary, Mount Airy.

Speakers, among them the Rev. John A. W. Haas, president-emeritus of Muhlenberg college, Allentown, expressed confidence Lutherans of varying theological opinions could be brought together on common ground, with belief in their own confessions of faith as the foundation for a unified denomination.

The Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor of Grace church, Washington, and a war-time navy chaplain, related how in war-days when everything with a German touch was under suspicion, "our Lutheran pride got a jolt," followed by post-war dissension and depression-time difficulties.

"Through the tangle of disagreement, misunderstanding and misapprehension let us try to build a new road to Lutheran unity," he urged.

Mr. Lenski questioned whether mergers already accomplished by some Lutheran groups were aimed toward upbuilding the church as a whole or toward forming "defensive alliances," and urged that all seek to avoid "ecclesiastical politics."

STOCK MARKET

New York, April 2 (AP).—Stock market leaders tumbled one to five or more points today following President Roosevelt's warning signal on the extensive production of durable goods and rising prices which he indicated were unjustifiable.

EVE'S ORCHARD

By MARGARET WIDDEMER

SYNOPSIS: Eve Mannersfield starts housekeeping in her 200-year-old home (with orchard) in Connecticut after five years in New York. Finally gay city-loving Denny gets a good job and they can be married. Meantime, George Cleveland, Eve's steady, dependable neighbor, falls in love with her. Living with Eve are Uncle Henry, an old family friend, and serious little Judge Featherstone whose carefree parents have left for Hollywood without paying their board bill to Eve. Denny deserts Eve in anger when she won't turn out Judge.

Chapter 32

George Stands By

Uncle Henry, coming in from his barn-chamber" washup after the milking, asked no questions. He had managed somehow to reassure Judge. If he noticed anything different about Eve, walking to and fro between kitchen and dining room like an automaton, he did not speak of it. He only said, "Now, daughter, you're tired after a long day; you set down and let me look after that mess."

"I can't. I'm wound up," she said, trying to smile. She went on piling up dishes on the sinkboard, scraping plates, putting away food. Her face and hands felt stiff and frozen, in spite of the warmth. The work was something to put between herself and all she had to think of. Uncle Henry put a strong gnarled hand on her shoulder.

"Daughter, you stand still. Go on upstairs now and get a bath and take off that thick dress and put on something cooler. Take your time to it. This place will keep."

His voice was authoritative. She found herself doing as he said.

The cool water on her tense body, the mere routine of change and freshening, of powdering and brushing her hair and putting on a freshly ironed pongee frock, of slipping into socks and canvas sandals, did give her a certain relaxation and sense of self-control.

She wondered how Uncle Henry came to be so wise.

When she came downstairs again he and Judge had set the card table on the portico facing the green, flower-strewn lawn and its vista of orchard and sky beyond. There was a cool breeze out here, fresh and smelling of roses. It was after seven, still light. She could hear the lap-lap of her brook. Judge, too, had been sent to change, and was fresh in his crash shorts and leather sandals.

She felt the coolness and beauty of the evening dimly, through the numbness, and talked—she could hear herself talking—pleasantly enough, praising the lettuce and radishes that Uncle Henry said were "from Oliver's garden" and drinking milk thirstily, though she did not seem to be hungry.

"Oliver's afraid his folks having to go visiting in such a hurry is going to put work on you," said Uncle Henry, "but I tell him with two such handy men as he and I are, and two less to do for, there'll be less work instead of more."

He told Judge to clear away. "Should he?" Eve remembered what the doctor said.

"Tonight, yes. It'll make him feel better to be useful," whispered Uncle Henry. "Seems as if he's got all the self-respect in the family."

He sent the little boy to bed as soon as he had come back from paying his devoted nightly visit to his pig. He settled back in his accustomed chair, lighting his pipe.

Uncle Henry Has A Plan
"Well, now daughter? Oliver says they didn't leave the money you'd been counting on. I think we'd better do some planning."

His undiscouraged voice and the fact that she did not have to go all over it with him were a comfort, but his next words hurt her sharply.

"That is, unless young Carter is settling here with you right away. I sort of thought you'd be fixing that up today."

So had she—oh, so had she and Denny both. She managed to shake her head.

"No. We can't manage it now." She couldn't talk about it to him.

"So." That was all he said, going on to the next thing. "Well, I don't guess—and you don't likely—that they'll be able to pay up very soon."

"They said they would send the money from Hollywood as soon as Peter got his job."

"Mhm. Sort of a crazy place, Hollywood. I've heard tell; not the sort that encourages good intentions. Don't count on it, daughter."

"I don't."

Things felt quieter. Uncle Henry's slow steady voice, dealing with the situation as if it could be coped with one way or another, brought everything into a quieter focus.

After all, Denny often had these flashes of heat-lightning anger, at once sullen and furious; it was just dumb bad luck that he'd had one on top of this Featherstone business. . . The storm seemed unreal, here in the quiet.

"Well, now, daughter," Uncle Henry went on, "I been thinking things over while I was milking, and I have an idea."

She glanced up in surprise. "About money?"

"Mhm. Evelina, would you feel it was beneath you to have me set up a roadside vegetable stand? From now on we'll be raising more greenstuff than we can eat. We can put it by the road on the lot beyond the front lawn. This road's a by-pass, there's lots of traffic already. And if you wanted to take orders for rolls and bread like your Aunt Lina did, that would help too."

I don't think you can count on renting this late."

Eve thought: fast. If Den hadn't had this fit of temper just when the needed to discuss plans with him!

Well, the main thing now was, they did have to have money. And these plans were as good as any.

She could pick somebody up, surely, to carry on here with the house and all the rest of it, if Den insisted on her settling in the city this summer; though when they talked it over he wouldn't, surely. His passion for good times would be sated by a few more of Mitz's gilded weekends. He couldn't go on insisting she give Judge up.

"Very well," she said resolutely. "And—will you ask George if his mother still wants to buy my lacquer cabinet? That should cover the taxes."

"You're a fine plucky girl, Eve," said Uncle Henry; and then: "You better ask him yourself. You could have had your pick of those two young men. And I hoped you'd pick right."

She didn't answer; she only patted the hard old hand he had laid on her knee.

George's Gesture of Help

Next day was a whirl; telephoning half the morning to Aunt Lina's old list of customers, dashing down with Adriano to put up a notice in the post office when he went for George's mail, ordering supplies, listening to Judge's excited solemn plans for saving money, arranging with George about the cabinet.

He would write his mother immediately, he said. As to the Featherstones, he said nothing at all, except, "I have such a bad temper that I have practically no use of it; if I started to talk about your friends, I'd say too much."

He flushed as he spoke, and his lips took the set that Eve knew by now meant, as he said, high temper controlled. He added:

"Eve, if there's anything else on earth I can do, you will let me, won't you? Don't forget I got you into this, in a way—sending you off with the kid. And—I'm glad I know you, Eve. You're—pretty fine as well as—as all the other things we aren't going to talk about."

He was leaning in at her open kitchen window, where she was standing at the long table making out lists of supplies. His blue eyes looked straight into hers. In spite of the hair that had been red when he was little—it gleamed now where the sun beat down on his uncovered head, and on the strong sunburned neck above the unbuttoned collar of his sportshirt—there was steadiness and dependability in everything about George Cleveland. It was a comfort to know he was her friend.

"I won't forget," she said, smiling at him. He reached through the window, nearly broke her hand with the pressure of his quick tight grasp—was gone. Eve sensed, not for the first time, the intensity that was almost frightening under the kind cool manner. But there was enough to do without thinking about George! She fell to her lists again. She would show Denny when he came back that she could earn money, that she could carry on gaily.

So far as summer people went, the Mannersfield house had stood for an unbroken dynasty of baked stuff for 20 years now. Eve had only to stop refusing to take orders, she had some already, just from going down to the post office and telling Emily.

So when the old man and the little boy and Eve sat on the portico that evening eating their bread and milk and scrambled eggs in the sunset, she was honestly cheerful. George's first gesture of help, it appeared, had been to buy the shiniest of the new bicycles that the local hardware store afforded, and present it to Judge. And Judge, understanding that by making deliveries he would be paying his way with Eve, beamed with content.

"You've done a fine thing for that child," Uncle Henry told her after Judge had run off to try his bicycle again, proud and excited. "I guess he's had to take charity pretty high always. And it's ground him, young as he is. I haven't handled stock all my life not to know humans too."

"He's a throwback to old Judge Allaire, as fine a man as ever lived. But he's sensitive; he'd been a ruined boy if this summer hadn't happened. And, child, don't you get downhearted because his people were lightweight and fooled you. There are those that are responsible and grateful. I'm one. You've done a fine thing for me too, giving me a chance to earn my way till I could do something else and I don't forget it."

"Oh, Uncle Henry, whatever would I have done without you? We're all living on your greenstuff now, like locusts!"

He smiled and patted her hand. They began to discuss biscuits and vegetables, but they understood each other.

BADLY INJURED WHEN CAR STRIKES POLE

Hagerstown—John F. Kidwiler, 38, 400 block of Elizabeth street, was badly injured early Sunday when the car he was driving struck a pole on the Williamsport-Martinsburg road, two miles from Martinsburg.

Kidwiler was rendered unconscious. He sustained injuries to the chest, lacerations about the head and both hands were crushed. Taken to the Martinsburg hospital by a passing motorist, he was brought to his home here on Monday.

$20,000 FIRE LOSS AT HOTEL BROOKS

York.—Fire, the origin of which is still undetermined, Wednesday completely ruined the laundry of the Hotel Brooks, and badly damaged ten rooms in the rear portion of the hotel. Five of the rooms are located on the first floor, and five on the second floor. Considerable damage was also caused by smoke which crept through the hotel, in the rear portion of the five-story hostelry. There are 100 rooms in the hotel. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

GIRL CYCLIST UNHURT IN COLLISION WITH CAR

York—Virginia Clauser, 340 South Albemarle street, escaped injury Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. when the bicycle she was riding collided with the rear of an automobile at Princess and Warren streets. Raymond Platts, 338 Warren street, in his report to city police, stated that he was traveling east on Princess street, and when he came to the intersection he stopped and the girl rode her bicycle into the rear of his car.

AAA PAYMENTS SPECIFY USE OF ADAPTED SEED

Participants in the 1937 agricultural conservation program were required to specify the use of adapted seed. The offices have already been moved from the old highway sheds at the south end of Carlisle. The old sheds will continue in use, pending the anticipated arrival of storage bins for stock. When the bins arrive they will be installed as a PWA project at the old sheds.

mined today by the Agricultural Administration that the program requires them to sow adapted seed in order to qualify for soil-building payments for seeding red clover and alfalfa or mixtures of these seeds.

This is a strict provision of the 1937 program, affecting all agricultural regions of the United States. In Pennsylvania, land seeded to clover, alfalfa or mixtures of these seeds from any source will be classified as soil-conserving in diversion counties, if state and county committees determine in late summer and early fall that there is a stand from the seed which will survive the winter. The land on which good stands are obtained will be counted in determining the diversion payment, but, as has been stated, the use of such seed will not qualify for any soil-building payment.

Mexico City, April 2 (AP).—Striking school students variously estimated at between 3,000 and 60,000 ended a 12-day walkout Thursday after agreeing to submit their demands to President Lazaro Cardenas.

Three thousand students had paraded about the streets of Mexico City, carrying the body of one of their number killed in a fall from

These Pennsylvania

WHO WANTS THE STORE TAX?

NOT THE WAGE EARNER AND CONSUMER

For the Store Tax would increase the price of the food he buys, and have the effect of reducing his wages. It would be a concealed sales tax on food and fall most heavily on those who can least afford it. The Democratic Party in Pennsylvania, has opposed sales taxes, it cannot logically favor this sales tax on the first essential of life.

NOT THE FARMER

For the chain stores are the best customers Pennsylvania farmers have. They have helped farmers organize the marketing of their crops. They have helped to develop a market for Pennsylvania potatoes, and for the first time in years Pennsylvania farmers get a premium for their potatoes. The chains have increased the sale of Class 1 fluid milk, and pay the highest prices for it. They have jumped in and helped sell crops from all over the Nation that otherwise would have sold at a great loss. In the last year the chains have co-operated with thousands of growers of apples, grapefruit, beef, lamb, turkeys and other farm products, in moving surplus crops.

As Pennsylvania farmers know, the chain stores of this State stand ready at all times to help them solve their selling problems. The annual purchases from farmer, producers and manufacturers in Pennsylvania amount to over $213,000,000.

NOT THE LANDLORD

For many landlords depend solely on the rents received from chain stores for their livelihood. Chain stores pay the highest rents and are sure pay. Chain stores raise the value of real estate by attracting other retail businesses to the neighborhoods in which they have stores. Chain stores pay rent in Pennsylvania that amounts to about $21,500,000 annually. A large part of which is returned to the state and municipalities in taxes.

NOT THE BUSINESS MAN

For business men realize that once Pennsylvania has taken this step to penalize efficiency and discriminate against the very companies which have done the best job, the doors are wide open for similar legislation aimed at any line of business in the State. They realize that it would be just as reasonable to pass graduated taxes on milk wagons, cows, taxicabs, etc., so that a man or a company owning many would pay on each one a tax 500 times higher than that of a competitor.

NOT THE BANKER

For the chain stores maintain substantial deposits in hundreds of local banks throughout Pennsylvania.

NOT THE CHAIN STORE EMPLOYEE

For the Store Tax threatens the jobs of thousands of native Pennsylvania citizens. There are nearly 4000 chain stores in the State—about one-third of all the chain stores in Pennsylvania—not one of which is making as much as it would be taxed under this bill. There are over 62,000 chain store employees in Pennsylvania, most of them born and raised in this State. Their families, friends, and customers, together with 116,000 chain store stockholders, would be injured by this legislation.

NOT THE THINKING CITIZEN

For the Store Tax Bill is unfair. It places an annual tax of $500 on a little food store making $500 a year because it happens to be owned by one of the popular chains, and taxes a huge department store making over $1,000,000 only one dollar. Its supporters claim on the one hand that it will not raise the price of food, while on the other hand they claim that it will help independent grocers by making chain stores raise their prices.

THE THINKING CITIZEN realizes that the cost of government must be met by taxes, and that chain stores have always paid their fair share willingly. He knows that chain stores pay local, state and federal taxes—as high, if not higher, than other stores doing a similar volume of business.

TELL YOUR SENATOR TO VOTE "NO"

YES, THIS ADVERTISING COSTS A LOT OF MONEY

Some people have said that if the chain stores can afford to spend so much money on this advertising campaign, they can afford to pay the Store Tax. We expected this criticism before we started. The amount of advertising space we have used may seem enormous. But all the advertising we have bought, including this advertisement, has cost less than 5% of the annual tax under this bill. This is a tax that would go on, year after year. We think we are justified in investing one-twentieth of the amount of what this tax would cost in one year to protect our customers, our employees and ourselves. We not only think we are justified, but we consider it our duty to tell the facts as we see them.

"We're getting along, somehow but it's pretty tough going"

says this mother, whose name and address will be furnished to accredited Welfare Agencies upon request.

"My husband is a paperhanger. We've been married ten years. When we got married, my husband made good money. Then times got bad. We don't have as much money as we used to, and we've got three children now.

"My husband gets jobs that bring in enough to eat if we are careful. Of course, we watch every cent. The chain store on the corner has been our friend during these times. I don't know what we would have done without it. Some say a big company is tough, but the chain store on our corner is not that way. Bill O'Brien, the manager, understands us and helps us in every way he can. Everybody here knows Bill.

"Bill has told us about this tax. He says it will raise the price of food and maybe close his store. If his store goes, we will lose a good friend, and if the other chain store down the street goes, too, we'll probably have to pay more for food. Everybody knows that chain stores have always sold the cheapest.

"Rich folks can pay a few cents more for food and not miss it. We can buy a pound of onions for four cents. An increase of one penny, and lots of people I know would have to do with less onions. They say children ought to have milk, but my children aren't getting enough milk now. Even a few cents put on the price of food, would cut down the little milk they are getting now.

"They say food prices are going up anyway. Why do they have to put a tax on our food so that it goes up still more? If they do, it will take food out of our mouths."

Mrs. M. W. Ketchum, Secretary of the Kensington Neighborhood House, and the Richmond Soup Society, who has devoted over forty of her seventy-eight years to welfare work, says:

"I have not visited this family, but I know of thousands and thousands of similar cases. The plight of this family in this advertisement is representative of a large percentage of our population—at least one-third. The statement does not exaggerate. There are many, many who are worse off in Pennsylvania."

"We've worked hard to build
business"

says Edward R. Fuller, President of Sylvan Seal Milk Co.

"During the depths of depression in 1932 we started a milk business which we thought would be successful if we saved the consumer money. We decided to use the cash and carry method of distribution exclusively. The chain stores lent their support, and today this business is successful, healthy and growing. It employs 200 people, and takes milk from about 800 fine Pennsylvania farms. Last year alone the housewives who bought our milk through the stores saved almost three hundred thousand dollars, and the farmers received higher prices. The closing of stores in any considerable amount would seriously affect the development of such a company as ours.

"There must be throughout the State any number of such manufacturers that would be similarly affected. It does seem that whenever a large industry such as the chain stores is menaced through confiscatory taxes, or similar attacks, not only the stores but many other industries dependent on the stores for the sale and distribution of their products are also seriously injured. In our dealing with the stores, we have had nothing but the most able and consistent co-operation and support. We strongly hope that no hastily considered legislation will jeopardize the livelihood of our 200 employees and our 800 farmers, as well as the savings that we can give to the consumer through the use of cash and carry."

citizens ask to be heard

"I have to sell my crops to live"

says P. D. Frantz, Farmer of Egypt, Pennsylvania

"I was born on a farm in Pennsylvania that my father and grandfather worked before me. My family has dug its living from the soil of this State for seven generations. My neighbors and I grow potatoes—lots of them. But it is just as important to a farmer to sell his crops as it is for him to have crops in the first place. What Pennsylvania farmers need is better selling.

"We're just starting to get somewhere here in Pennsylvania through the chain stores, and we don't want this thing spoiled just as it amounts to something. We've worked out a selling program with the chain stores that put nearly three million dollars extra cash into the potato growers' pockets last year. And it's going to be bigger next year. That comes from an official report of the potato growing industry.

"For the first time since potatoes were grown in Pennsylvania, we're getting higher prices than the Maine farmers. That's because instead of taking them to somebody who didn't give a darn about us, we take them to the chain stores, who understand what we're up against. I think even the farmers who don't sell to chain stores will say that the way these Pennsylvania chains have got together with us has brought higher prices to every potato grower in the State. I've heard the growers of other crops say the same thing.

"The chain stores have been a godsend in helping us move surplus crops. Finding somebody who can sell your potatoes, when there are so many that nobody wants them, is like watching it rain after a dry spell. And it helps people in the city, too, because it lets them share in the abundance which Nature sometimes thinks wise to produce,

"The National Administration is doing all it can to help farmers fight such things as droughts and floods—things which keep the farmer from growing his crops. I can't see why any Pennsylvania Senator should want to injure the farmer at the other end—the selling end. The Store Tax Bill would be almost as big a blow to Pennsylvania farmers as no rain during the growing season. It would cripple the companies that are doing the best job we've ever had done for us. I hope that every Pennsylvania farmer who wants to protect his best market will sit down now and write his Senator a sizzler against this Store Tax Bill."

"I have a good job and a good chance to get ahead"

says Al Love, Manager of a Chain Store at 3301 Spring Garden Street

"I am 26 years old and a graduate of South Philadelphia High School. I have a wife and a baby. I have a comfortable home, a car, a radio—more than most men of my age can afford. I am a chain store manager. I enjoy my work, and I like the company I work with.

"I have a great many friends who went to high school with me, and I know that I am making more money than most of them. I think I have a better chance for advancement than they have. The chain store grocery business is one of the few businesses in the world that still insists that its executives come up through the ranks. The next step ahead of me is a larger store, with a larger income, or a job as a supervisor. Among all my friends, I know of no one who has a better chance of immediate promotion, or a better opportunity to work into an important position in the future.

"I am the manager of a very small chain food store that is making about $400 a year for my company. My clerk earns more than twice that. The landlord receives exactly twice as much as that in rent for my store. Yet your Senator may vote to tax my store $500 a year.

"It is all right to talk about the profits my company makes in other States. But what would happen to the branch of the company in which you, yourself, work if it were taxed more than it earns? You can't expect a company to operate any part of its business at a loss. The Senators who are in favor of this tax would not run their own businesses in that way,

If they did, they would not be in business long. Some of them are very successful.

"I am an American citizen. I was born in Philadelphia. I work in the city where I was born. I think I'm a good citizen. I'm sick of seeing a company that gives me a decent living put on the spot every time the legislature meets. I can't understand the reasons behind laws that threaten my job and everything I have worked for since I got out of school. There are over 62,000 chain store employees plus their friends and customers in the State of Pennsylvania who are starting to wonder."

PENNSYLVANIA SPEAKS!

The Evening Bulletin, Philadelphia:

"PENAL TAXATION. . . . A member of the Legislature may choose to stand with the group of individual merchants who think they are to be benefited by the chain-store tax, or he may stand with the large number of consumers who know they are to be hurt by it and protest. But no one can dodge the vital issue presented in this bill and stroke his chest in contented thought that he is voting some extra salary for the poor, forgotten, public school teacher."

Coatesville Record:

"IS IT A REVENUE RAISER? . . . Tax the chains, if you must, would be our advice to the legislature. In doing it, however, let it be known that you are attempting to drive them out of business or trying to increase the cost of living. Don't kid the public with a lot of buncombe about helping the schools."

The Scranton Tribune:

"HARD ON THE POOR. . . . The proposed store tax indicates that the time has come when the poor are expected to pay. State Senators will be likely to give serious thought to that."

The Sunbury Item:

"A TAX ON FOOD. . . . This measure would raise but little revenue at a staggering cost of collection, probably from 25 to 30 per cent on the basis of past performance; it would result in closing stores, adding to unemployment and it would raise the cost of food to the consumer. It is an indirect sales tax, and the person who will pay is the person whose back is already bowed under a staggering tax load."

Wilkes-Barre Record:

"REGULATION BY TAXATION. . . . To illustrate this in the case of the chain stores, one can now wonder what will be the fate of unprofitable units in large chains which have been carried along by the profitable stores and although unproductive to the owners, have yielded income to landlords and have been sources of employment. Whether a heavy tax will force abandonment of such stores is a question inevitably raised by the new tax law under discussion."

Carbondale Leader:

"THE CONSUMER WOULD PAY. . . . Taxes are a part of the overhead of every business. High taxes mean high business costs. The consumer pays them just as surely as he pays the gasoline tax."

Allentown Morning Call:

"A TAX THAT HOUSEWIFE WILL PAY. . . . The rising tide of prices is particularly evidenced in the costs of foodstuffs and therefore most acutely affects the poor and the poorly paid groups of every community in the country. The rich can endure advances in food prices. The poor cannot."

The Evening Ledger, Philadelphia:

"CONSUMERS WILL PAY. . . . As the main interests affected by the proposed bill are food concerns, the natural outcome would be an immediate increase in the cost of living. And as usual the burden will fall on those least able to pay. . . . The tax is branded as an indirect sales tax and the Democratic Party in Pennsylvania is on record as opposed to sales taxes."

Times-Leader, Wilkes-Barre:

"A TAX ALL WOULD FEEL. . . . The net results will be an affliction to the very people whose needs have been most considered by benevolent administrations. These very people will feel this added and unwelcome burden, in the price of sugar, of lard, of bacon, of fruits, meats of all kinds, and staple and fancy groceries. The question then occurs, as it has occurred so many times, so often, is it a wise thing to do?"

The Sunbury Daily:

"THE PUBLIC WILL FOOT THE BILL AGAIN. . . . The fate of the bill will eventually rest with the public, which will or will not make itself heard, but, if enacted, the public will, of course, foot the bill."

Carlisle Sentinel:

"TAX ON FOOD STORES. . . . The Earle administration is dedicated to 'the greatest good for the greatest number,' and in this matter it should look well to the interests of the consumers."

Pittsburgh Press:

"THE CHAIN STORE TAX. . . . Even if the chains did not cut down the number of stores or lease them, it is ridiculous to assume that they would completely absorb this tax. It would be passed on to consumers in the form of higher food prices. . . . They simply would be paying another form of a sales tax upon that most basic of all commodities, food."

Record Herald, Waynesboro:

"TAX ON STORES. . . . This might be only a step toward the imposition of taxes on other businesses. The bill will bear watching whether you believe in chain stores or whether you do not."

Daily Times, Beaver:

"HOUSE BILL NO. 228. . . . Already, too many industries have been driven from Pennsylvania by unfavorable and excessive taxation."

Dispatch, York:

"THE 'SOAK THE POOR' BILL. . . . We hold no special brief for the chain stores, but we do hold a brief for those to whom the economies made possible by the chains spell the difference between having enough to eat and going hungry."

Altoona Mirror, Altoona:

"THE STORE TAX BILL. . . . These stores give employment to large numbers of people in this state. They rent many buildings. The proposed tax may result in much unemployment and vacant store rooms everywhere. Moreover, the tax will be reflected in higher prices for the necessities of life with a corresponding reduction in the purchasing power of a dollar."

Brownsville Telegraph:

"CHAIN STORE TAX ATTACK. . . . Many thoughtful independent merchants, as a matter of fact, know now the chains taught them how to be successful merchandisers. For these lessons they have cause to be genuinely grateful. Moreover, they know that from a burdensome tax on chain stores it is only one step further to an equally burdensome extra tax on their own establishments."

Times, Chester:

"PENNSYLVANIA WAR ON CHAIN STORES. . . . For a number of years in this vicinity, the American Stores and the A & P Stores have supplied food to residents. Their prices have been low and the quality high. Why must they be punished?"

Greensburg Review:

"PUBLIC SHOULD AWAKE. . . . It has generally been observed that the raise in wages which has come and is coming in many lines will mean little or nothing if prices of the essentials of life continue to increase by leaps and bounds."

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph:

"EFFICIENCY PUNISHED. . . . Such hobbles make the cost of merchandising greater, and the public pays the bill."

The Philadelphia Inquirer:

"ANOTHER TAX ON THE MARKET BASKET. . . . This form of taxation as a means of raising revenue has been suggested before. It cropped up at the two last sessions of the Legislature, but was disowned by the State Administration and got nowhere."

Tribune, Johnstown:

"ATTACKING THE CHAINS. . . . The inequality of this measure is at once apparent. It means that the small chain store doing a neighborhood business will be assessed $500, while a large department store doing many millions of business will pay $1."

The Evening News, Wilkes-Barre:

"A TAX ON STORES. . . . The tax on stores would not be a luxury assessment. If it were, it would not cause the concern that a levy on food and other essentials does."

Philadelphia News:

"STORE TAX BODES MORE HARM THAN GOOD. . . . This will soak the people on relief just as hard as it will those who are working for their wages."

Space does not permit the printing of more than a small percentage of those opposing the store tax

Tell him to vote "NO" on the store tax bill

Last year, California passed a Store Tax just like this one. Then they put it up to the people to vote on. The people voted against it in 57 out of 58 Counties. You can defeat it now in Pennsylvania before it becomes a law. Let your Senator know what you think before it is too late. He WANTS to know.

Sundown Story

A PIG PATIENT
THE bears had gone off on an eating-walk, Christopher was taking a flight, the ducks were in their pond and Sweet Face was in his meadow, while Rip had gone for a long cross-country run.

Top Notch was taking a sun bath in front of Willy Nilly's house, and Willy Nilly was out in his shed doing some repairs on his automobile Two-Ways.

All of a sudden Top Notch noticed two pigs coming up the road. One was quite fat and the other was somewhat thinner and younger.

"Grunt, grunt," said the fatter pig, "is the doctor at home? A hen at our barnyard said that Dr. Willy Nilly had made her well."

"Did you have an appointment?" asked Top Notch grandly.

"No, grunt, grunt. But won't he see me anyway? I've come quite a distance. I want my little son Pig-Pig to see him."

"I'll see what can be done," answered Top Notch. "Won't you step into the waiting-room?"

Top Notch went around and spoke to Willy Nilly, and the little man went into the house. He was sorry Top Notch had ushered them indoors as they had made muddy tracks on his floor and Mrs. Pig had curled up in his big chair.

But perhaps the young pig was hurt. Willy Nilly asked Mrs. Pig about her son.

"He refused to eat his dinner yesterday," grunted Mrs. Pig. "He slept all the time we were eating."

"I'll give him something for his appetite," said Willy Nilly.

"Do," urged Mrs. Pig. "I don't want a son of mine to disgrace the family name of Pig and lose his appetite."

"I'm sure he'll be all right. He just needs a spring tonic."

At that moment Mrs. Pig gave a squeal and a grunt and cried: "I'm fainting!"

JUST FOLKS MARCH 31
THE MEANING OF LOSS

He tossed it on a rubbish heap,
Contented to forsake it;
A thing he didn't want to keep,
But not a soul would take it.

He put it under lock and key
Endeavoring to conceal it,
Twas very dear to him and he Feared thieves would try to steal it.

Our richest joys we cannot keep,
We know they all must perish,
But things upon life's rubbish heap
We neither love nor cherish.

So by the sorrows all must share
The depths of love we measure,
The harder seems the loss to bear
The richer was the treasure.

THE FUN OF IT

I MET a man on the train recently. He was busy on a puzzle that he found in a newspaper. I asked him why he spent so much time on it. He said: "Oh, just for the fun of it!" A wise man.

If all of us devoted a few hours each day to some occupation, just for the fun of it, there would be fewer broken bodies and minds and fewer shattered nerves.

I envy Amelia Earhart. She has long planned a trip around the world in her plane. She will undoubtedly secure much added scientific knowledge and contribute much to the business of flying. But I am sure that she is taking this trip largely for the pure fun of it. She is built that way. The entire world wishes her good luck and a safe return—with her object attained.

People in business, for the fun of it, get vastly more out of life than those who are in it solely for what money they can get. People in work that they dislike, had better make a change before old age and ill health swoop down upon them, laughing at their foolish waste of life.

I have a friend in Cleveland, Ohio, the noted cartoonist J. H. Donahy, who has a small farm a few miles from the city, where he raises all sorts of things. He is forever grafting his trees and trying to produce strange combinations of fruit. He tells about it with many a chuckle and you see at once why he has kept so young. He likes fun.

Bob Davis, the famous writer for the New York Sun, travels the earth and gets fun out of it, besides the joy that he gives to so many by his matchless tales from many lands. But his main hobby is taking pictures of noted men. He has one of the finest collections of portraits in the world—and he has positive genius in getting his man. His photographs are so real that many of his subjects have remarked that for the first time they have seen themselves!

Do something—be somebody—just for the distinction of gaining the fun from it!

"Prescriptions CAREFULLY COMPOUNDED"

Remember when every village druggist used to run that phrase in his "standing ad" in the local paper. Yes, it's a bit old fashioned in these bustling days. But it aptly describes our service. We're proud to direct attention to our Prescription Department. For ours is primarily a Drug Store. We invite your prescription business and assure you of fair prices, prompt, exact service and fresh, potent drugs.

"Prescriptions CAREFULLY COMPOUNDED"

Remember when every village druggist used to run that phrase in his "standing ad" in the local paper. Yes, it's a bit old fashioned in these bustling days. But it aptly describes our service. We're proud to direct attention to our Prescription Department. For ours is primarily a Drug Store. We invite your prescription business and assure you of fair prices, prompt, exact service and fresh, potent drugs.

BALTIMORE
The live stock supply Thursday consisted of 700 cattle, 250 calves, 1,700 hogs and 400 sheep.

Cattle—Mixed action and prices developed in the cattle division. There was a fairly brisk opening on steers, with prices strong to 25c higher than on Monday. Later the action became slow, but with prices remaining on the steady to strong side. Very dull action was noted on cows. On early pounds there were practically no sales. Later a scattering of sales were consummated at steady to weak terms, while bids were 25c to 30c lower on many lots with general indications that cows would close a full 25c below Monday. A few heifers and bulls were sold about steady. Bulk of the medium grade steers old at $9.00 to $10.50, and most lots were in the lightweight classification. A few lots of 1,100-1,200-pound steers made $10.75 to $11.00, these being mainly in the good grade. Some light yearlings were noted up to $11, while a part lot of good medium weight steers topped the day at $11.65. Several lots of yearlings reaching $10. Lightweights sold at $8.50 to $9.50, a few real thin sorts below $8. A few plain and medium huffers brought $7.87 1/2, a few head of good yearling heifers reaching $10. Most of the low cutter and cutter cows sold at $3.75 to $4.75, plain and medium beef cows making $3.66, a few good cows around $6.50 and above. Plain and medium bulls brought $6.65 to $7.50, light cutter bulls cutting down to $7.50 or below.

Calves—Trade was about steady on vealers, with good grades going at $10.00 to $10.50, plain and medium grades selling at $7.50 to $8.50, culls downward to $6. Weighty calves were practically absent.

Hogs—Very narrow demand continued to influence slow trading and further price weakness in the local hog trade. Values yesterday were quoted around 5c lower than Wednesday. Good and choice grades of harrons and gifts selling 170-210 pounds sold at $10.50 to $10.75, with the latter price the practical limit. Most 220-250 pound weights turned at $10.00 to $10.50, while heavy weights were salable down to 29.35 and below. Most of the 140-160 pound weights below $9.50 to $10.00, and slaughterers on through killing sold above the prices listed above. Hogs from doubtful territory are not represented in prices quoted.

Sheep—Trade was not fully established on lambs on early rounds of the yards yesterday. A few fed clipped lambs and some slaughter ewes were noted at about steady prices. Good and choice lambs made up to 11.50, some medium grades of clipper selling down to $10. A few good woolled slaughter ewes were noted at $6.50, common grade down to $4.

LIVE POULTRY
(Prices include commission)
Chickens—Rocks, 23 1/2c; mixed colors, 23 1/2c; broilers, 23 1/2c; mixed colors, 23 1/2c. Fowl—Rocks, 19c to 20c; mixed colors, 17c to 18c; all kinds, poor and thin, 12 1/2c to 14c.

DEADLOCK IN COAL PARLEY 400,000 IDLE

Hear President May Step in If Agreement Can't Be Reached.

New York, April 2 (AP)—Still deadlocked, the committee of miners and operators negotiating a new wage and hour agreement for the soft coal industry recessed Thursday until this afternoon.

President Roosevelt's intervention unless an agreement was reached soon was predicted in usually well informed circles.

United Mine Workers officials said 400,000 miners would stay away from work today and would not go back until the new agreement was signed.

The operators estimated about thirty days coal supply was above ground.

Wages Only Bar

Wages was the only stumbling block in the way of an accord. The operators were divided on whether to meet the miner demand for time and a half for overtime. They agreed to meet the union's demand for a fifty-cent increase in the basic day rate wage of $5.50 under the agreement that expired Wednesday at midnight.

After a two hour meeting of the negotiating committee of eight miners and eight operators tonight, John L. Lewis, union president, gave the following explanation for the recess:

"The operators asked more time. Evidently they want to think it over."

Asked whether there would be a strike today, Lewis said:

"There won't be any work."

McGrady Stands Ready

The negotiations here affect directly only the mines in the Appalachian area, reaching from Central Pennsylvania to Northern Tennessee but agreements for all other mines worked by the United Mine Workers are based on the Appalachian contract and are not made before the Appalachian agreement is signed.

had said he would "offer the Federal government's services" if Thursday's negotiations proved fruitless. He refused to say whether he would propose an extension of the old contract while negotiations proceeded.

Before the operators agreed to the fifty-cent increase in the basic daily pay rate, the union had agreed to withdraw demands for a thirty-hour work week, two weeks vacation with pay and a guarantee of 200 days work each year.
